

guitarist, band member, sophomore, performer, writer, artist, teacher

how did the band start? "Evan [Miller] and I started playing together in sixth grade. We were always searching for a singer and we talked to a lot of different people and then in eighth grade I was in choir with Noah [Blazer] and I knew he was a good fit. Brett [Ramer] was our manager but then he started learning bass. We kept on practicing and were asked to play at the Maple Syrup Festival." what is your band's name? "The Echoes. We echo the music of the 70s and 80s." what was your favorite performance? "July 4th when Evan was playing the bridge to 'We're Not Gonna Take It' and then his drumsticks slipped out of his hand and went flying and Noah clutched up and caught the stick and threw it back to Evan. Evan caught it and then continued playing." what was your favorite song to perform? "My favorite song to perform is 'Come Together' because it was the first song we ever did and I feel like when people hear that song they think of us. It brings me back to our first performance."

"railfan" devotes spare time to tracking down Indiana's historical trains what do you do on your train busting adventures? I chase trains down and record them. I find where the trains are from chat groups on Facebook.

what do you look for in a train? Sometimes railroads will paint engines into old schemes. I love everything about trains, but my favorites are the steam locomotives.

Steam locomotives are the old ones they used to run in the 1900s. how did you become interested in looking for trains? I still ask myself that question. I'm not really sure how exactly I got into it. I just know that I love them.

how often do you go looking for trains? I go every day. After I catch a train once, if I think I can catch up again, I'll try to get set up in front of it again and wait for it to pass. how long have you been filming trains? I started filming trains around eighth grade year. do you hope to pursue a career involving trains? Yes, I am hoping to be an engineer for one of the railroads. The conductor speaks with dispatch. The engineer drives.
